

The Bob Green Collection

Bob Green was born in 1893 in Horsham to George and Susan Green in June 1893, one of five children. He lived in Spencer's Road in 1901 and attended Victory Road School. By the age of 17, he was serving an apprenticeship with a firm of solicitors, later moving on to the West Sussex Gazette. He worked his way up to become a journalist and was a press correspondent for the Reuters news agency. It is believed that he covered the Hague trial and also worked on some sketches of the event.

Art was Green's hobby and he became a member of the West Sussex Art Club. He was an excellent political and sporting cartoonist.

During the First World War, Green served in the Royal Horse Artillery and was unfortunately gassed. During the Second World War, he served as a special constable.

Robert Green died in 1965.
